Pertinent Paragraphs

Lemon Grove needs all the organizations we have now. All these organizations deserve your wholehearted support. They are all doing wonderful work in their own field. But, the welfare of the community of Lemon Grove rests primarily on the Chamber of Commerce. Lemon Grove will grow as fast as our Chamber pushes the growth of the community. We all know that Lemon Grove will grow despite all drawbacks. It would even grow without a Chamber of Commerce, a Business Men's Club or a Service Club.

Lemon Grove is growing so fast that it seems impossible to provide even the most essential services, such as schools, sanitation, fire protection,etc.

Remember, residential development alone cannot provide these services. Local industrial and commercial development means business taxes as well as residential tax revenue. This added tax revenue provides the funds for community development. Support home industry and you will be able to enjoy community services.

Your Chamber of Commerce is starting a membership campaign. Do not criticise your Chamber at this time. This is the time to get as many new members as possible and then, with the aid of these new members, make the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce the kind of organization you want it to be.

Your Chamber of Commerce can do more for you than any other organization. Let's all join now for a united effort.

Chamber of Commerce Starts Membership Drive This Week

Last week the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce announcd June 1st at the opening Day of their Membership Drive.

Walter Williamson is Chairman of the membership committee. This committee includes some thirty men and they have divided into groups headed by the following group Captains: Harry Monell, J. T. Walters, F. H. Cressy, Dr. Gilbert Chassey, and J. Ammons.

Residents and Business Men are urged to join, to make the the Chamber of Commerce strong. The Committee members are convinced that they will be given a cordial reception and wholehearted Cooperation.

Lemon Grove was for many years a quiet country side—where folks really lived. Then came World War II. San Diego grew so fast that its citizens began to move. They came and are still coming to Lemon Grove by the score. Our schools are over-flowing making double sessions necessary. New schools are being built to care for the children. The churches have expanded New businesses are coming each month. The First National Bank saw the possibilities, so they too will open a branch on July 1st.

This rapid growth has created new and puzzling problems. Just to name a few- Sewers, Street Maintenance, Traffic Control, Street Lighting, Fire Prevention and a Community Center.

Some group or some body of citizens must represent the total citizenship in the solution of these problems. We are an unincorporated community and are governed by a County Board of Supervisors. This Board is concerned with the whole of San Diego County and it is impossible for them to know the needs of each segment of the County. They, therefore, look to the local Chamber of Commerce for the needed help.

The Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce has accepted the challenge to represent our citizens and act for them in these puzzling problems.

The Chamber of Commerce must include all the business enterprises and as many of the individual citizens as possible to attain its real strength. As it grows in membership, it strengthens its position with our governing body; it develops ability to proceed with many projects like the Community Center; it will be able to help you and your fellow citizens create a Community in which we will be proud to live, work and buy.

The grading has been done for the Community Center. This week end Chris Ferguson and his Committee will need some real "muscle men" who can use a pick and shovel. Will you volunteer? Or will you send along a check to the Community Center Building Fund, which will cover the cost of a day or more labor? If so, call either Chris Ferguson at Homeland 6-3863 or the President at Homeland 6-3568. If you are sending a check mail it to Community Center Building Fund, Box 96, Lemon Grove, California.

There are two prodjects under way namely: (1) Strengthen the Chamber of Commerce by adding scores of new members and (2) Completing a Community Center of which we will be proud.

In unity there is strength.

Telephone Co. Manager Speaks To Lions

Last Thursday Russell Kleigle, Manager of the Telephone Company for San Diego and Imperial Counties was the guest speaker at the Lions Club. Mr. Adams, manager of our district was also a guest of honor. There was also a committee from the El Cajon Lions Club.

Mr. Kleigle reviewed the history of the development of Lemon Grove. He pointed out that the unprecedented growth of the Community made it impossible for their engineers to convince the Company that the development would be as rapid.

The directors of the Company had to be convinced that the growth of this community would continue in the same measure after the war. Now the directors realize that the district will continue to develop on the basis of industries moving into the south-west.

Based on the plans adopted last year, Mr. Kleigle gave definite dates for the completion of some of the projects. He showed how the main cables had been laid and that from now on connections would be made and that after July service connections could be expected in most locations with only normally reasonable delays.

Mr. Kleigle answered questions and asked the people of Lemon Grove to take their difficulties to Mr. Adams, the local manager, who would do all in his power to straighten things out.

THIS AND THAT

by Dr. Frank Weege, D. C.

But in nature we more rarely find much fat combined with starch, and when hot fat penetrates starchy food, as in the case of fried potatoes, or crumbed or floured fried foods, like croquettes or fried oysters, an unnatural combination is produced. This type of fried food seems to be particularly trying to the digestion.

The doughnut belongs to this class of food, and so do pastries in general. The statement is often made that deep frying is not so objectionable as shallow frying, because the immersion in hot fat quickly seals the food and prevents the penetration of more grease. But certainly this does not apply to crumbed croquettes, doughnuts, or even French fried potatoes, which are the most common types of foods fried in deep fat. Moreover, the fat, in such cases, is often heated to too high a temperature, so that irritating substances are formed. The objection to fried foods is chiefly due to the difficulty of digesting grease soaked starch and sugar combinations. But the increased fat in the diet is also an objection. We need some fat in our food, but the natural fats in nuts, milk, eggs and cheese, together with our free use of butter and salad oils, usually give us enough. When fat meats are added, and then fried potatoes and pastry, the diet becomes overloaded with fat, and one is obliged to overeat in order to get sufficient amounts of essential food elements. Fried foods and pastries, as generally used in the American diet, are highly objectionable, except, perhaps, in the case of men doing hard work in cold climates.

Two of the more unusual cooking processes are braising and fricaseeing. The former is really a combination of stewing and baking. It is an economical way of cooking and is usually applied to meats. The meat to be braised is first sauteed. This coagulates the protein, prevents loss of this element, and adds flavor as well. The meat is then placed in a covered pan with a small amount of water or stock to which vegetables are usually added. It is baked at a low temperature and the resulting product is extremely tender and has an excellent flavor.

Fricaseeing is also generally applied to meats, the process consisting of sauteing tender meats and serving with a sauce. If less tender meats are prepared in this way, they should first be stewed or boiled, then sauteed. A still further application of this method is to saute the meat first, then cook slowly in a sauce. Such intricate processes, however, belong to the old school and simpler methods are more popular at present.

The characteristics of the foods to be cooked will be an important factor in deciding the best manner of preparation, and indeed, in deciding whether or not it should be cooked at all. A little has been said of the effect of heat on protein, that it is coagulated by hot water and dry heat, so that when meat is broiled the coagulated protein on the surface prevents loss of juices and flavor. This principle is observed when meats are prepared in other ways. The surface is always seared or exposed to heat, unless one wishes to extract the juices for broths or extracts. In the latter case the meat is put on in cold water, as this dissolves soluble proteins, especially if a little salt is added.

The action of heat on starch is also very interesting. Dry heat converts starch to dextrin at a temperature of 320 degress Fahrenheit. This substance is easier to digest than the raw starch and does not have its thickening power. The change to dextrin is also brought about by acids, that is why lemon juice lessens the thickening power of starch. When starch is cooked in a liquid the heat causes the starch grains to absorb liquid, swell and soften so that the liquid is thickened by them.

There has been much dispute as to the relative digestibility of raw and cooked starch and many interesting experiments have been made along that line. One of the earliest of such investigations was conducted by Milo Hastings at the Kansas Agricultural College in 1906. Mr. Hastings, while studying animal nutrition at this college, decided to broaden his studies of animal nutrition to include human nutrition. He therefore took the course in scientific cooking that was given to the girl students. In that course he found they were teaching that raw starch was indigestible by man. This seemed to him utterly inconsistent with the evidence of the animal feeding experiments, which proved that the cooking of grains and potatoes for live stock was no advantage, but rather a disadvantage in the production of either fat or milk.

Mr. Hastings therefore undertook a series of original experiments which proved that the cooking of foods for humans did not ordinarily increase their digestibility and that the idea that uncooked starch was indigestible by man was erroneous. In the case of beans, however, he found that cooking did materially improve the digestsibility.

Sometimes words followed by deeds bespeak of the simple grandeur of man.
—Harry E. Burroughs

MINK COATS ARE FUN!

A film "giveaway" of laughter, fun and romance is in store for moviegoers at the Grove Theatre Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 7, 8, 9 as Twentieth Century-Fox presents its newest comedy release, "Miss Mink of 1949."

In the hilarious Sol M. Wurtzel production, the consequences that might befall the winner of an expensive mink coat in a radio slogan contest are explored with highly comic results.

Featured in the comedy are Jimmy Lydon, Lois Collier, Richard Lane and Barbara Brown supported by Paul Guilfoyle, June Storey and others. Glenn Tryon directed the picture from a screenplay by Arnold Belgard.

To ruminate upon evils, to make critical notes upon injuries, and be too acute in their apprehension, is to add unto our own tortures, to feather the arrows of our enemies, and to resolve to sleep no more.

REAL-LIFE SITES GIVEN REEL LIFE IN 'SHOCKPROOF'

Although a considerable portion of "Shockproof," new romantic drama starring Cornel Wilde with Patricia Knight at the Grove, Theatre on Sunday and Monday, June 5, 6, was filmed in actual locations, still more real-life backgrounds had to be constructed by Columbia for one reason or another. Street scenes and alleyways in down town Los Angeles were used "as is," along with an office building and a candy factory which were "borrowed" for important sequences.

But the international border immigration station at Tia Juana, Mexico, was duplicated by the studio as was the Los Angeles Municipal Airport ticket office. It had originally been planned to film these, and several other locations, on the actual spot, but the heavy traffic of passengers, tourists and pedestrians made the plan impractical.

"Shockproof" is the high tension drama of a man who thought he was shockproof, only to discover that his wife's past is even worse than he had realized. Douglas Sirk directed the film, with a careful eye towards complete realism about plot situation and settings.

In addition to Wilde and Miss Knight, the cast of "Shockproof" includes John Baragrey, Esther Minciotti, Howard St. John, Russell Collins and Charles Bates. The film was written by Helen Deutsch and Samuel Fuller.

FILM MAN SHOWS INDIAN HOW TO APPLY WARPAINT

It took a Hollywood makeup artist to revive the ancient Indian art of applying war paine.

When Lee Greenway arrived in Banff, Canada, with the assignment of daubing warpaint on the Yiskabee Indian braves for scenes being filmed there in Cinecoler for "Canadian Pacific," the new Twentieth Century-Fox release opening Tuesday at the Grove Theatre, he found the Indians had all but forgotten that colorful art.

However, when they saw themselves made up, they became so interested in the procedure that they prevailed upon Greenway to teach their children the lost art of applying their tribal warpaint. In gratitude, the Yiskabees officially named Greenway "Chief Paleface-In-Color."

Randolph Scott is starred in the Nat Holt production whose cast includes Jane Wyatt, J. Carroll Naish, Victor Jory and Nancy Olson.
